The brand, its language, and its use by partners

Document DNCV040426-010002 April 2026
Confidential. For authorized partners only.

Document control

This document is the Vexienne Brand Manual. It covers the three registered brands partners work with every day, namely Vexienne®, Vexienne® Hair Active X, and Follicopeptide®, and sets out the visual identity, the voice, and the language partners use when they write, sell, and communicate about them. It is issued by Coegin Pharma AB to authorized distribution and retail partners as the single reference for how the brands look, sound, and are talked about.

Ownership and contact

Owner: Coegin Pharma AB, Sweden.
Brand contact: marketing@coeginpharma.com
Asset delivery: the Vexienne Partner Resource Center (DocSend).

Document status

Document number: DNCV040426-010002
Effective date: April 2026

Scope

The manual covers the brand story, visual identity, voice, approved cosmetic claims, descriptor language, compliance guardrails, and the practical rules for using the Vexienne brands alongside a partner's own identity. It is organised in two layers. The brand layer speaks to Vexienne® and Follicopeptide® and applies in full to every Vexienne product, including Vexienne® Hair Active X. The product layer carries only the details unique to a specific licensed product. Today it speaks to Vexienne® Hair Active X, the lead product in the series. In future issues, partners will receive the product pages that match the products covered by their purchase order.

Confidentiality and use

This manual is confidential and is provided solely to authorized Vexienne® partners for internal use in support of the commercial distribution of Vexienne® products. It may not be copied, forwarded, or reproduced externally without written permission from Coegin Pharma AB.

Vexienne® and Follicopeptide® are registered trademarks of Coegin Pharma AB.

How to use this manual

Vexienne® is a brand owned and regulated by Coegin Pharma AB. Coegin acts as the Responsible Person for the products released under the brand under EU Regulation 1223/2009, and supplies finished, retail-ready product to selected partners for distribution and sale under the Vexienne brand name.

Because Coegin owns the brand end to end, partners do not need to design Vexienne assets themselves. Product packaging, photography, campaign visuals, product detail page copy, banners, and supporting content are supplied by Coegin through the Vexienne Partner Resource Center. This manual exists so that partners understand the brand, recognise it, protect it, and place it correctly alongside their own identity.

How the manual is organised

The manual is built in two layers. The brand layer speaks to Vexienne® and to Follicopeptide®, and sets out everything that is true of the Vexienne brand regardless of which product a partner is selling: the brand story, the logo system, the colour palette, typography, photography direction, the Vexienne voice, and the rules for co-branding with a partner's own marks. Everything in the brand layer applies in full to Vexienne® Hair Active X, and will apply to every future product released under Vexienne.

The product layer, marked discreetly at the foot of the page as Product annexe, carries only what is specific to one licensed product: the approved cosmetic claims, descriptor language, compliance guardrails, the nightly routine, the honest timeline, and answers to common customer questions. Today the product layer speaks to Vexienne® Hair Active X; future issues will add the product pages matching a partner's purchase order.

What partners will find inside

- Who Vexienne is and what the brand stands for.
 - The logo system and how to use it against different backgrounds.
 - The colour palette, typography, photography direction, and the Vexienne voice.
 - Practical rules for co-branding Vexienne with a partner's own marks.
 - Product-specific cosmetic claims, descriptor language, and compliance guardrails.
 - How the product fits into a nightly routine, and the honest timeline of results.
 - Where to request assets, and who to contact for anything not covered here.
- Where a question is not answered in this manual, please write to marketing@coeginpharma.com before publishing.

THE PALETTE AT A GLANCE

A map of the brand colours used in this manual

Each section of this manual carries a coloured bar down its outer edge. The bar tells you, at a glance, which part of the brand world the page belongs to. Deep green and dark navy do most of the work. Vexienne purple and Vexienne blue come in for selected sections. Breathing teal is the accent panel colour used throughout.

DEEP GREEN

Front matter, logo system, photography, expectations and back cover. The dominant brand anchor.

DARK NAVY

Brand story, colour, claims, compliance and assets. Used wherever the brand needs gravity and weight.

VEXIENNE
PURPLE

Typography and the Vexienne voice. Used sparingly, for the more expressive moments of the brand.

VEXIENNE BLUE

Approved descriptors and the way the descriptor language combines with claims.

BREATHING
TEAL

Accent panels for pull quotes, combination cards and Q&A blocks throughout the manual.

Neutral greys are used throughout for body copy and supporting type; see section 13, Monochrome text palette.

01 THE BRAND ESSENCE

Hair thinning is not a destiny.
It can be reversed.

VEXIENNE®

02 BRAND AND PRODUCT

How the pieces fit together

Before going any further, it is worth being precise about what Vexienne is, and what it is not. The word Vexienne does a lot of work in this manual, and the brand and the product behind it are not the same thing.

Vexienne is the brand. Follicopeptide® is the active that defines it today. Vexienne® Hair Active X is the lead product in the series.

Vexienne is the brand

Vexienne is a hair care brand owned by Coegin Pharma AB. It is the brand under which Coegin brings its Follicopeptide® peptide research to consumers, in the form of finished, retail-ready products. The lead product released under Vexienne, Vexienne® Hair Active X, is built around the patented Follicopeptide® peptide in a water-free gel serum vehicle that is itself protected by its own patent. Coegin develops each Vexienne product in-house, and over time the brand is drawn to hold more than one product, including, potentially, adjacent products that sit alongside the Follicopeptide® range, and to grow in a controlled and considered way.

Vexienne® Hair Active X is the lead product

Vexienne® Hair Active X is the lead product released under the Vexienne brand. It is the leave-on, anhydrous gel serum for the scalp that is described in the rest of this manual. When this manual talks about how the product feels, how it is used, what it claims, and what it does not claim, it is talking about Vexienne® Hair Active X.

When this manual talks about who Vexienne is, what Vexienne stands for, how Vexienne looks, and how Vexienne sounds, it is talking about the brand.

A working rule for partner copy

On first prominent use in any partner-facing piece, the product is written in full, as Vexienne® Hair Active X. On subsequent mentions in the same piece, Hair Active X may be used on its own once the full name has been established. The word Vexienne, on its own, always refers to the brand. Approved cosmetic claims are always tied to Vexienne® Hair Active X by name, never to Vexienne alone.

This distinction also shapes the manual itself. The brand pages are the same for every partner, and everything they say about Vexienne and Follicopeptide® applies in full to Vexienne® Hair Active X, as it will to every future product released under the brand. That means the logo system, the colour palette, the typography, the photography direction, the Vexienne voice, and the co-branding rules are the guardrails for Vexienne® Hair Active X as much as for Vexienne itself, and are not restated inside the product annexe. The product pages, marked discreetly at the foot of the page as Product annexe, carry the details that are unique to one product without repeating what has already been said at the brand layer. Today they speak to Vexienne® Hair Active X; in future issues, partners will receive the product pages that match their licensed products.

03 THE VEXIENNE BRAND AT A GLANCE

What Vexienne is

Vexienne® is a modern hair care brand from Coegin Pharma AB, built around its patented Follicopeptide® peptide research. The brand sits at the confident end of the beauty category. It looks at hair thinning as something a person can take action on, without having to reach for medicines or complicated routines.

The lead product released under the brand is Vexienne® Hair Active X. It is a leave-on gel serum for the scalp, used once a night, delivered in a precision airless applicator. It is designed for people who are starting to see their hair look thinner and who want to do something about it with a product that feels good in the hand, easy to live with, and grounded in real science. When this manual talks about what Vexienne stands for, it is talking about the brand. When it talks about how the product is used, how it feels, and what it delivers, it is talking about Vexienne® Hair Active X as the lead expression of that brand.

What makes it different

There is a lot of noise in the hair category. Vexienne stands out because the brand is built on a patented peptide developed through years of research, and on a vehicle system that is itself patented as a water-free gel serum. Neither of these is borrowed. Both are owned end to end by Coegin Pharma AB. The brand does not rely on medicines, botanical extracts, or claims you cannot measure.

Vexienne® Hair Active X, the lead product in the series, puts that peptide and that vehicle to work in a leave-on formulation built for nightly use over months, not weeks. The formulation is designed not only as a delivery format but as an active cosmetic system: it supports the cosmetic condition of the scalp and hair surface under regular use, helping maintain comfort, cosmetic feel, and a favourable scalp surface environment over time. It is designed to work through consistent use and to show in the mirror, gradually, over time.

The promise is simple. With consistent nightly use, Vexienne® Hair Active X improves the appearance of hair density in thinning areas, and it helps maintain the appearance of hair over time. Approximately seven out of ten users may expect to see a visible improvement. Results vary between individuals, and that honesty is part of the brand.

Who Vexienne is for

Vexienne speaks to adults who are starting to notice thinning in the mirror and who are ready to do something thoughtful about it. That includes women as well as men, and it includes people who have already tried other products and want something that feels more credible and easier to stick with.

The brand is not for people looking for an overnight fix, and it is not for areas where hair is no longer present. It is for anyone who is willing to give a nightly routine four to six months to show what it can do, and who prefers a science-led, hormone-independent product over a hope-led one.

The feeling the brand should leave behind

After a customer has seen a Vexienne pack, a Vexienne campaign visual, or a piece of Vexienne copy, the feeling we want them to walk away with is something close to this. That the brand is intelligent without being cold. That it is modern without chasing trends. That it is confident without shouting. That what it is saying about hair is believable, because the brand sounds like it actually understands the subject and is not trying to sell a miracle.

Beauty is emotional. Vexienne is a beauty brand first and a science brand second, in that order. The science is the reason you can trust it. The beauty is the reason you want to pick it up.

A beauty brand first and a science brand second. The science is the reason you can trust it. The beauty is the reason you want to pick it up.

04 THE STORY BEHIND FOLLICOPEPTIDE®

The peptide at the heart of the brand

Follicopeptide® is the patented peptide that sits at the heart of the Vexienne brand and of Vexienne® Hair Active X, the lead product released under it. It is a precisely defined peptide ingredient, composed of natural amino acids, chemically synthesised for consistency and free of any animal or botanical origin. It was born in 2006 out of peptide research carried out at Lund University in Sweden, where a small team became interested in short peptide sequences inspired by naturally occurring human proteins. That academic starting point was translated, over time, into a cosmetic ingredient that could be reproduced reliably and formulated for daily use.

Follicopeptide® refers to the peptide alone, not to any finished product or formulation. Where a Vexienne product is built around Follicopeptide®, it is Coegin that decides how the peptide is delivered to the scalp, in a formulation and delivery system developed in-house for that product. Those formulations are proprietary to Coegin, and some, such as the water-free gel serum vehicle used in Vexienne® Hair Active X, are protected by their own patents. Over time, the Vexienne brand may also come to include adjacent products that sit alongside the Follicopeptide® range without necessarily containing the peptide themselves.

Why it matters to a consumer

Most people who pick up a hair thinning product are not looking for a chemistry lesson. The reason the Follicopeptide® story matters is that it explains, in a few words, why Vexienne can be trusted. There is a real peptide that has been studied. There is a real formula that has been patented. And there is a real brand that stands behind both of them and owns the whole story, from the research bench to the carton on the shelf.

0 5 T H E C R O S S E D X

Five readings of a single letter.

The X at the centre of the Vexienne wordmark is the recognition point of the brand. It is also where the brand keeps its meaning. Five short readings, on the page that follows.

Five readings of a single letter

The crossed X is the recognition point of the wordmark, and it is also where Vexienne keeps a small set of meanings. None of them is shouted on the page. They are simply there, the way good marks always carry more than they show.

01

Hair, in one letter.

Two lines cross. A parting sits between them. Once you see it, the X never looks like just a letter again.

02

X and Y. Drawn for both.

There is a second reading, gently carried. X and Y. Vexienne was made for women and men from the first sketch, and the letter at the centre of the wordmark has carried that quietly from the beginning. A category that has long defaulted to one audience is, here, drawn for both.

The X factor.

There is a third reading. In a category crowded with products that reach for the same idea in much the same way, Vexienne was drawn from a different starting point and is protected so that it stays one of a kind. The X at the centre of the wordmark is a small, quiet reminder that this brand is not a version of anything else.

04

Precision at the centre.

The exact centre of an X is a single point where two strokes meet. It is the tip of an airless applicator. It is a drop placed exactly where a drop is meant to go. Vexienne® Hair Active X is a precision product, and the geometry of the mark already knows that.

05

Where two patents meet.

And there is a fifth reading. The crossing itself. Two things brought together at a single point. The patented peptide and the patented vehicle it lives in, meeting in one formulation. The crossed X is the story of Follicopeptide® in a single letter.

06 THE LOGO

The Vexienne mark

With the meaning of the crossed X in mind, the logo itself is straightforward. The Vexienne logo is a custom wordmark based on the letters V E X I E N N E, built around the crossed X at the centre that acts as the recognition point of the brand. It appears in two lockups: the primary lockup carries the wordmark together with the line “Powered by Follicopeptide®” directly beneath it, and the secondary lockup is the wordmark on its own.

The primary lockup is the default for almost every application. It introduces the brand and anchors it to the ingredient story in one glance, and it is the version partners should use unless there is a specific reason to do otherwise.

The logo features the word "VEXIENNE" in a bold, sans-serif typeface. The letter "X" is stylized with two overlapping, curved lines that intersect at the center, creating a sense of movement and depth. A registered trademark symbol (®) is positioned at the top right of the word.

Powered by Follicopeptide®

Primary lockup. Deep green on light background.

07 LOGO VARIANTS

The logo family

The Vexienne logo is supplied in a small, deliberate set of files. Each version is designed for a specific kind of background, and partners should not recolour or recreate the logo outside this set. All approved files are available from the Vexienne Partner Resource Center.

Primary lockup, deep green

VEXIENNE®
Powered by Follicopeptide®

Used on light, neutral, or warm grey backgrounds. This is the default.

Reverse lockup. Light teal on deep green. Used on dark brand surfaces.

Wordmark only, deep green

VEXIENNE®

Used only when the tagline has already appeared on the same surface, or at very small sizes.

Black utility

VEXIENNE®
Powered by Follicopeptide®

Used only for monochrome partner formats where colour is not available.

08 CLEAR SPACE AND MINIMUM SIZE

Room to breathe

The Vexienne logo needs room around it to carry weight. The rule is straightforward. On all four sides of the lockup, keep a margin of clear space equal to the height of the letter V in the wordmark. Nothing, including partner logos, body copy, photography elements, buttons, or decorative shapes, should come closer than that.

Minimum reproduction size

The primary lockup, with the Follicopeptide® tagline visible, should never appear smaller than 25 millimetres wide in print, or 100 pixels in height on screen. Below that size the tagline becomes unreadable and the lockup loses its credibility.

The wordmark-only version may be used down to 20 millimetres wide in print, or 80 pixels in height on screen. This is the only context in which the wordmark-only version should be chosen in preference to the primary lockup.

A simple test

If you can read the tagline comfortably at arm's length on a printed page, or on a phone held at a normal reading distance, the logo is large enough. If you find yourself squinting, either scale up the primary lockup or switch to the wordmark-only version.

Protecting the mark

Please do

- Use the supplied logo files exactly as provided by Coegin.
- Place the logo on backgrounds that allow it to breathe and remain legible.
- Keep the registered trademark symbol intact on both Vexienne and Follicopeptide.
- Respect the clear space and the minimum reproduction sizes.
- Choose the colour variant that fits the background rather than forcing one that does not.

Please do not

- Recolour the logo outside the supplied palette.
- Stretch, compress, skew, rotate, or otherwise distort the wordmark.
- Add drop shadows, outlines, glows, bevels, or filter effects.
- Place the logo on busy photography without a contrast plate behind it.
- Separate the tagline from the wordmark within the lockup, or re-typeset it.
- Remove the registered trademark symbol from Vexienne or Follicopeptide.
- Combine the wordmark with other graphics, icons, or ornaments to create a new lockup.
- Animate the logo in a way that distorts its proportions or implies motion effects not supplied by Coegin.

10 COLOUR

The anchor and the gravity

Vexienne lives in a deliberately confident colour world. The anchor of the brand is a deep green, supported by a dark navy that gives weight and seriousness to larger applications. These two colours carry the brand in its most restrained moments, and they are the colours that customers will see most often on pack, on shelf, and in brand-led communication.

Deep Green

HEX #04342F RGB 4, 52, 47

Primary brand colour. Used for the logo, headlines, key surfaces, and any moment that needs to feel unmistakably Vexienne.

Dark Navy

HEX #17173B RGB 23, 23, 59

Dark secondary. Used for large colour blocks, alternate dark surfaces, and moments where the brand wants depth without reaching for green.

11 COLOUR

Vibrant secondaries

The vibrant secondaries are where the brand keeps its energy. They are used in supporting roles, for accents, for section differentiation, for packaging details, and for moments of colour that stop the palette from becoming heavy. They should be used with intention, not spread thinly across everything.

Vexienne Purple

HEX #6153A3 RGB 97, 83, 163

A vibrant secondary. Used sparingly for highlights, icons, section accents, and supporting graphic moments.

Vexienne Blue

HEX #3F77BC RGB 63, 119, 188

A vibrant secondary. Used for supporting graphic elements, data visualisations, and selected digital touches.

12 COLOUR

Breathing room and neutral

Against the depth of the primary palette, the accent colours do the quiet work of letting the brand breathe. The light blue-green is the deliberate counterweight to everything dark. It is the colour that should appear on the website, behind product photography, and on social media surfaces, to give the rest of the palette somewhere to land. The warm grey is a neutral used for dividers, secondary surfaces, and calm background moments where the light blue-green would be too much.

ACCENT

Breathing Teal

HEX #D7F4EE RGB 215, 244, 238

Breathing-room accent. Used for digital backgrounds, photography surfaces, social canvases, and any moment that needs air.

NEUTRAL

Warm Grey

HEX #C4C5BF RGB 196, 197, 191

Neutral accent. Used for dividers, supporting surfaces, and background moments where a softer, quieter neutral is needed.

13 MONOCHROME TEXT PALETTE

Colour for type

When the brand sets text in colour on a light background, it does not use the solid palette directly. The primary colours are tuned for surfaces and for the logo. For typography, a parallel monochrome palette is used, so that coloured type reads cleanly and stays in tonal harmony with the surfaces behind it.

Text Green

HEX #06695C RGB 6, 105, 92

For coloured headlines and accents on light surfaces, as the text-weight counterpart to the primary deep green.

Text Navy

HEX #17173B RGB 23, 23, 59

For headlines, subheadings, and long-form body copy that needs weight without reaching for pure black.

Text Blue

HEX #5C9AD3 RGB 92, 154, 211

For secondary accents, pull-quotes, and supporting moments where the vibrant blue is used as type.

Text Purple (deep)

HEX #454885 RGB 69, 72, 133

For deeper purple accents in text and captions on light surfaces.

Text Purple (light)

HEX #7D77B7 RGB 125, 119, 183

For lighter purple accents, delicate captions, and supporting graphic type.

Two typefaces

The Vexienne type system is built on two typefaces, used together in a fixed relationship. They were chosen to give the brand authority without stiffness, and modernity without following a trend.

Utile Display Medium

Used for the Vexienne wordmark itself, and for all display-scale typography in brand-owned materials. This is the typeface that sets the tone for large statements, cover headlines, and pack headings. Partners do not need to license it for their own channels; all brand-led materials using Utile Display are supplied by Coegin.

Familjen Grotesk Medium

Used for body text, for the “Powered by Follicopeptide®” tagline, and for supporting typography throughout the brand. It is clean, contemporary, and comfortable to read at long form. Like Utile Display, it is used by Coegin in brand-owned materials; partners writing about Vexienne in their own channels are welcome to set their own body copy in their house typeface.

How the two work together

Utile Display carries the large moments. Familjen Grotesk carries the rest. Display type is set in the monochrome text palette, most often in Text Navy or Text Green. Body type is set in a dark neutral for maximum legibility. Both typefaces are set generously, never cramped, and the brand does not use all-caps headlines outside of small label and tag moments.

15 PHOTOGRAPHY DIRECTION

How Vexienne looks in pictures

Vexienne photography is calm, confident, and naturally lit. It favours real skin and real hair over heavy retouching, shallow depth of field over busy compositions, and close-up intimacy over staged distance. The product appears in hands, on bathroom surfaces, next to morning light, next to books and ceramics, in the kinds of settings where a thoughtful nightly routine actually happens.

People in Vexienne imagery look like themselves. They are not styled to look younger than they are, and they are not styled to look like anyone in particular. Thinning is shown honestly in early frames and progress is shown honestly in later ones. Before-and-after imagery is permitted and encouraged where it is genuinely representative. It must be real, taken under consistent lighting and framing conditions, and not retouched, staged, or selected only from best-case users in a way that exaggerates outcomes.

Colour and surface

Backgrounds are often set in the breathing teal, in warm grey, or in deep green. Product shots are taken with enough space around the bottle that the pack has room to be the subject. Lifestyle shots favour soft, directional daylight over studio strobes, and avoid strong colour casts.

Where to get the images

All approved Vexienne photography is supplied by Coegin through the Vexienne Partner Resource Center. Partners should not source their own imagery for Vexienne-branded communication. For a specific use that is not covered by the library, write to marketing@coeginpharma.com and the team will either supply existing material or brief a shoot. Product and lifestyle video follows the same photography direction, logo rules, and voice as static assets; any brand-led motion is supplied by Coegin through the Resource Center.

How Vexienne talks

Like a beauty editor who happens to know the science, rather than a scientist who is trying to sell you something.

The Vexienne voice is warm and intelligent. It speaks to a real person in a real bathroom, not to a clinical audience in a journal. It sounds like a beauty editor who happens to know the science, rather than a scientist who is trying to sell you something. It is direct without being blunt, confident without being loud, and honest without being cold.

The brand prefers short, clean sentences that carry their own weight. It does not build phrases around industry buzzwords or pile on adjectives for effect. It names things plainly. It uses ordinary words where ordinary words will do, and it saves the more technical language for moments where the technical detail is actually the point.

What the voice sounds like in practice

A Vexienne product description reads like a short, considered note from someone who has thought about the product. It talks about how it fits into the evening, what it feels like to use, and what to expect over time. It uses the approved claims in the places where it is making a claim, and it uses descriptor language in the places where it is describing the product rather than promising a result.

Tonal reference points

- Warm, not cold.
- Confident, not assertive.
- Direct, not blunt.
- Grounded, not hyped.
- Honest about what the product can do, and honest about what it will take.

17 CO-BRANDING WITH PARTNER MARKS

Vexienne alongside your identity

In most partner contexts, Vexienne will appear alongside the partner's own brand, whether on a category page, in an email campaign, inside a store window, or in a joint social post. The aim of this section is to set out a few practical rules that keep both brands looking their best.

Clear space between marks

When the Vexienne logo appears next to a partner mark, keep a distance between the two that is at least equal to the height of the letter V in the Vexienne wordmark. This is the minimum. More space is better than less. The two marks should never touch or overlap.

Which variant to use against which background

On light partner surfaces, use the primary lockup in deep green. On dark partner surfaces, use the reverse lockup in light teal on deep green, or request from Coegin a version of the reverse lockup against the partner's specific background colour if the deep green does not sit comfortably. On monochrome partner surfaces where colour is not available, use the black utility version.

Alignment and weight

When set side by side horizontally, the Vexienne wordmark and the partner mark should be optically balanced in weight. This usually means the Vexienne wordmark is scaled so that its x-height is similar to the x-height of the partner mark, rather than matching the absolute height of the two logos. A neutral vertical rule between the two marks is acceptable if the partner's own guidelines call for one.

Multi-brand grids

Where Vexienne appears as one tile in a multi-brand category grid, it sits as a peer to the other brands in the grid. Use the primary lockup at the same optical weight as neighbouring brands, without added emphasis, and do not allow partner graphic treatments such as badges, ribbons, price flags, or promotional stickers to cover the wordmark or the Follicopeptide® tagline.

Partner master-brand lockups

Where the partner's own master-brand lockup anchors the composition, Vexienne appears as a clearly secondary product brand beneath it. The clear-space rule still applies. Do not scale the primary lockup so small that the ® symbol or the "Powered by Follicopeptide®" tagline becomes unreadable; where that would happen, switch to the wordmark-only version rather than shrinking the primary lockup.

17 CO-BRANDING WITH PARTNER MARKS, CONTINUED

What not to do

- Do not recolour the Vexienne logo to match the partner's palette.
- Do not merge Vexienne with the partner mark into a single composite lockup.
- Do not place the Vexienne logo inside a partner container, badge, ribbon, or promotional sticker that obscures the lockup.
- Do not apply effects, shadows, or outlines to make the Vexienne logo match partner graphic treatments.

P R O D U C T A N N E X E

Vexienne®

Hair Active X

The pages that follow are specific to Vexienne® Hair Active X, the lead product released under the Vexienne brand. Everything in the brand layer still applies. What changes here is the language the product itself is allowed to use, the way it is placed in a routine, and the expectations it is allowed to set.

18 HOW VEXIENNE® HAIR ACTIVE X FITS INTO A NIGHTLY ROUTINE

A nightly ritual

Most hair products are built on hope. This one isn't. Vexienne® Hair Active X is a water-free gel serum delivered in a 15 ml precision airless applicator. At its centre is the patented Follicopeptide®, building on 20 years of research and development.

Vexienne® Hair Active X is used once a night, in the evening, before bed. Part the hair to expose the scalp, then dispense a small amount from the airless applicator, or place it on a fingertip for longer hair, and apply directly to the areas that look thinner. Massage in lightly, leave on overnight for at least one hour before any contact with water, and wash out the following day as part of the normal hair routine.

The product is designed to fit into life rather than take it over. One to two pumps per thinning area is enough. A thin, even film is better than a thick one. For multiple thinning areas, work section by section to ensure even coverage. The formula dries down quickly and comfortably, so sleep and bedding are not affected. The airless applicator keeps everything clean between uses and allows for precise placement, whether someone is working on the front hairline, a parting, or the crown.

What consistency looks like

Vexienne® Hair Active X is a routine, not a quick fix, and the brand is honest about that. Most users see little change in the first eight weeks as the habit settles in. Around month four, visible changes may begin to appear when comparing photographs to baseline. With continued use, clearer differences may follow by month six. The product is designed for ongoing nightly use.

When partners talk about Hair Active X, setting this expectation is one of the most valuable things they can do. A customer who understands that results are measured in months, not days, is a customer who stays with the product long enough to see what it can do.

19 APPROVED COSMETIC CLAIMS FOR VEXIENNE® HAIR ACTIVE X

What partners may say

The following cosmetic claims have been substantiated by Coegin and are the claims partners may use in communication about Vexienne® Hair Active X. They should be used exactly as written. They should not be strengthened, expanded, combined with medical or physiological language, or rephrased in ways that imply an effect beyond what the claim says on its face.

Claim 1. Vexienne® Hair Active X improves the appearance of hair density in thinning areas.

Alternative accepted phrasing:

- Helps hair look fuller and denser.

The primary performance claim. May be used in product descriptions, marketing headlines, pack copy, and partner communications. Relates to appearance only.

Claim 2. Vexienne® Hair Active X helps maintain the appearance of hair over time with consistent use.

Alternative accepted phrasings:

- Designed to help maintain the appearance of hair with regular use.
- Supports maintenance of the appearance of hair with ongoing use.

The maintenance claim. Used to communicate the long-term, appearance-based benefit of continued nightly use.

Claim 3. With consistent use, approximately 7 out of 10 users may expect visible improvement. Results vary between individuals.

Alternative accepted phrasing:

- In controlled human use testing, around 70% of users experienced visible improvement when the product was used as directed.

The visible-improvement claim. When used, the “results vary” caveat must always appear alongside the number, in the same sentence or immediately after.

Claim 4. Vexienne® Hair Active X is suitable for both men and women.

Alternative accepted phrasing:

- Suitable for use by both men and women.

The audience claim. Refers to cosmetic suitability and tolerability only.

Claim 5. Vexienne® Hair Active X’s patented formulation supports the condition of the scalp and hair.

Alternative accepted phrasings:

- Helps maintain the condition of the scalp and hair.
- Designed to condition the scalp and support the appearance of hair over time.

The supporting claim. Refers to conditioning and maintenance of the scalp and hair surface.

No other claims may be made without prior written approval from Coegin. Pre-translated, locked claim sets for other select languages and an example Vexienne® Hair Active X product detail page built only from approved language, are supplied in the Partner Resource Center; any further language adaptation by the partner must follow this manual in full.

20 APPROVED DESCRIPTORS I

Language you can build with

Descriptors are the non-claim building blocks partners may use when they write about how Vexienne® Hair Active X is designed, how it is made, how it is used, and where it comes from. Descriptors describe the product. They do not promise a result. That is what the approved claims are for.

The descriptors below may be used freely in partner copy, provided they are not combined with any language that implies a biological, physiological, pharmacological, or therapeutic effect, and provided no claim is strengthened or expanded beyond its approved wording.

A. Formulation and development

Clinical formulation
 Clinically inspired formulation
 Developed using a clinical development approach
 Formulated following clinical development principles
 Developed under controlled evaluation conditions
 Clinically evaluated cosmetic formulation
 Evaluated in controlled cosmetic use conditions
 Assessed under structured cosmetic evaluation protocols

H. Scalp surface condition

Designed to support a cosmetically favourable scalp surface

Descriptors may appear together in the same sentence or paragraph, and may be combined with approved claims in the same sentence, provided the sentence remains cosmetic in nature and no biological or therapeutic implication is introduced.

22 COMBINING DESCRIPTORS AND CLAIMS

How the pieces fit together

The real craft of writing about Vexienne® Hair Active X is combining a descriptor with a claim in a way that sounds natural, stays compliant, and still lands commercially. The examples below are drawn from combinations that have already been reviewed and cleared, and they are meant as a starting point for partner copy rather than a closed list. The approved claim wording is always the fixed element. The descriptor around it is where the copywriter has room to move.

01

A patented cosmetic formulation that improves the appearance of hair density in thinning areas.

02

A science-led cosmetic formulation that improves the appearance of hair density in thinning areas.

03

A hormone independent cosmetic approach that improves the appearance of hair density in thinning areas.

04

Evaluated in controlled human use assessments, Vexienne® Hair Active X improves the appearance of hair density in thinning areas.

05

A cosmetic formulation powered by patented technology and designed for consistent nightly use. With consistent use, approximately 7 out of 10 users may expect visible improvement. Results vary between individuals.

06

Designed for consistent nightly use, the formulation helps maintain the appearance of hair over time.

07

A leave-on cosmetic formulation that supports the cosmetic condition of the scalp and hair while improving the appearance of hair density in thinning areas.

Rules for combining

What is allowed

- Descriptors and approved cosmetic claims may appear in the same sentence, paragraph, or headline.
- Approved claim wording must be used exactly as written, without strengthening or expansion.
- Descriptors may be chosen from any category and combined freely with each other, provided the result still reads as cosmetic.
- The “results vary between individuals” caveat must accompany any use of the 7 out of 10 responder framing.

What is not allowed

- Combining descriptors or claims with any biological, physiological, pharmacological, or therapeutic language.
- Describing or implying a mechanism of action, such as how the peptide interacts with the scalp or what it does biologically.
- Adding language that implies a cure, a treatment, or a medical outcome for hair thinning.
- Using scientific background context, including references to academic research, proteins, or cellular biology, in the same sentence as an approved cosmetic claim.
- Introducing new numbers, percentages, or timeframes that are not part of the approved claim wording.
- Comparative claims against named competitor products.

23 WHAT WE DO NOT SAY

The line we do not cross

Vexienne® Hair Active X is a cosmetic product. It is not a drug, a medicine, or a therapy, and Coegin makes no medical claims about it. The brand's credibility depends on staying on the right side of that line every time it speaks. The list below is not exhaustive, but it covers the language that most commonly causes compliance problems in the hair thinning category.

Language to avoid

- "Hair growth", "regrowth", "stimulates growth", "promotes growth", or any variation that implies a biological growth effect.
- "Treatment", "therapy", "cure", "fights hair loss", or any medicinal framing.
- "Proven to", "guaranteed results", or language that strengthens the approved claims.
- Descriptions of how the peptide or the formula works beyond what is stated in the approved claims.
- Comparisons to pharmaceutical hair loss products, or to prescription treatments.
- Promises of a specific timeframe for individual results, or of a minimum response rate for an individual user.

On scientific background context

Coegin holds a body of scientific background context about the peptide science that informed Follicopeptide®. That context is for internal and educational use only. It must not be presented as evidence of the product's effect, it must not appear alongside a cosmetic claim in the same sentence, and it should not be used in consumer-facing communication at all.

If a specific use of scientific background is being considered, please check with marketing@coeginpharma.com first.

24 SETTING EXPECTATIONS FOR HAIR ACTIVE X

The honest timeline

Vexienne® Hair Active X is backed by a substantial research and development program. It has been evaluated across multiple clinical studies, conducted in collaboration with leading European hair clinics and clinical experts. One of the reasons hair thinning products disappoint is that they are often sold with a timeline that does not match how hair actually behaves. Hair Active X is designed around a realistic rhythm, and the brand will always be more successful when a partner sets that rhythm clearly at the point of sale.

Results you measure in months. Not promises you forget in weeks.

Month 1 to 2

The habit is forming. Most users do not notice a visible change in this window, and they should not be expected to. What matters in the first two months is that the product gets used every night, and that the user takes a baseline photograph under consistent lighting to compare against later.

Month 3 to 4

Early visible changes may begin to appear for many users. Month 4 is the primary evaluation checkpoint. This is the right moment for a user to take a new photograph under the same conditions as the baseline and compare them side by side.

Month 4 to 6

With continued consistent use, clearer visible differences may begin to appear when comparing photographs to baseline. A second photograph under the same lighting is the best way to judge.

Month 6 and beyond

For someone who sees a difference at month six, the question is usually whether to continue. The answer is yes. The product is designed for ongoing use, and continuing the nightly routine is how visible improvements are expected to build and be maintained over time.

The habit is where the result lives. This is worth repeating as often as the copy allows, without turning it into a lecture.

25 ANSWERING COMMON QUESTIONS ABOUT HAIR ACTIVE X

Compliant, human answers

When a customer asks a direct question about Vexienne® Hair Active X, the best answers are honest, warm, and anchored in the approved language. The responses below are a starting set. They are written to stay inside the compliance guardrails of the previous sections, and to sound like something a real advisor would say rather than a scripted response.

Q U E S T I O N

“I have tried other hair products and nothing has worked.”

A N S W E R

That is a fair concern, and it is one of the reasons Vexienne® Hair Active X is built the way it is. It is a patented cosmetic peptide formulation designed for consistent nightly use, which means it is meant to be judged at month four, not at week four. Most users who stay with it start to notice clearer visible differences between month four and month six.

Q U E S T I O N

“Will it make my scalp oily or sticky?”

A N S W E R

It is a water-free product with a fast dry-down, designed for comfortable overnight wear. The trick is to apply a thin, even film on the scalp rather than a thick layer. Used as directed, it settles in and is not noticeable on the pillow.

Q U E S T I O N

“Can women use it as well?”

A N S W E R

Yes. Vexienne® Hair Active X is suitable for both men and women and has been evaluated for cosmetic safety and tolerability under normal conditions of use.

Q U E S T I O N

“How long until I see something?”

A N S W E R

Most users see very little in the first eight weeks while the routine settles in. Around month four, early visible changes may begin to appear when compared to a baseline photograph, and with continued use, clearer visible differences may follow by month six. Individual results vary, so the honest answer is to give it time and compare photographs rather than memory.

25 ANSWERING COMMON QUESTIONS ABOUT HAIR ACTIVE X, CONTINUED

QUESTION

“Can I use it with my other hair products?”

ANSWER

Yes. If another product is applied to the same area of the scalp, allow a few minutes between applications. It is also a good idea to avoid washing the hair for at least an hour after applying the product, so it has time to settle on the scalp.

QUESTION

“Is it safe for long-term use?”

ANSWER

Vexienne® Hair Active X is a cosmetic product evaluated for safety and tolerability under its intended conditions of use, and it is designed for ongoing daily application as part of an evening routine.

QUESTION

“What if I miss a night?”

ANSWER

Pick it up again the next night. One missed application is not a problem. Consistency over months is what matters, so try to avoid longer gaps.

QUESTION

“I feel like I am shedding more at the start.”

ANSWER

Some users notice normal day-to-day variation in shedding early on. The best thing to do is to keep to the nightly routine and compare progress against a baseline photograph at month four and again at month six. If concerns persist, the product can be discontinued.

QUESTION

“Can I stop after month four if I am happy with what I see?”

ANSWER

The honest advice is to continue using it. As with skincare, the benefit is maintained with ongoing use. The formulation helps maintain the appearance of hair over time with consistent use.

25 ANSWERING COMMON QUESTIONS ABOUT HAIR ACTIVE X, CONTINUED

QUESTION

“I have sensitive skin: will it irritate my scalp?”

ANSWER

It is always sensible to do a small patch test first: a drop behind the ear, left overnight, is enough to check. If the scalp is comfortable, begin with the full nightly routine. Anyone who tends to react to new products can start with every other night for the first week or two, then move to nightly use once the skin has settled. If irritation develops at any point, stop using the product.

QUESTION

“I feel like there is residue in my hair the next morning.”

ANSWER

A little goes a long way. The most common cause of residue is applying too much or applying to damp hair. Try a thinner film on fully dry hair, and apply a little earlier in the evening so the product has time to absorb before bed. Most users find that once they dial in the right amount, there is nothing noticeable in the morning.

QUESTION

“I have been using it for two months and I do not see any difference.”

ANSWER

That is completely normal and not a reason to stop. Hair follows its own cycle, and the first eight weeks are too early to judge. Month four is the first sensible checkpoint, and with continued use, clearer visible differences may follow by month six. The best way to track progress is to compare a photograph taken today with one taken at the start, under the same lighting. Memory is unreliable: photographs are not.

QUESTION

“Will it stain my pillowcase?”

ANSWER

The product is clear and designed for comfortable overnight wear. When applied as a thin, even film on the scalp, transfer to bedding is minimal. In everyday use, most people notice nothing on the pillowcase at all.

QUESTION

“Can I use it if I colour or dye my hair?”

ANSWER

Yes. The product is applied to the scalp, not to the hair shaft, so it does not interfere with colour-treated hair. After a fresh colour treatment, it is a good idea to wait a day or two before resuming use, just to let the scalp settle.

Where to find everything

All approved Vexienne assets are made available to partners through the Vexienne Partner Resource Center, which is hosted on DocSend. The Resource Center is the single supply point for logo files, product imagery, lifestyle photography, pack visuals, copy blocks, campaign banners, social assets, the Vexienne fonts where licensing allows, pre-translated approved-claim sets for other select languages, an example Vexienne® Hair Active X product detail page built only from approved language, and any version-controlled brand documents including this manual. New versions of this manual are posted there with a change log, and partners are notified on release. Partners then decide at their discretion whether and when to refresh in-market materials, except where Coegin flags a change as mandatory, for example the withdrawal of a claim, in which case partners update or withdraw affected assets without delay.

Access and contact

Access to the Partner Resource Center is provided by Coegin at the start of the partnership and can be refreshed on request. For access, for new asset requests, and for questions genuinely not answered by this manual, write to marketing@coeginpharma.com. The team will respond within two business days.

Working with this manual

Partner communications that stay inside the approved claims, descriptors, voice, and brand-use rules in this manual do not require case-by-case approval from Coegin. Partners can brief, write, translate into their house tone, lay out, and publish on that basis. Approval is needed only when a partner wants to go beyond this manual, for example by introducing a claim that is not on the approved list, by using Vexienne® or Follicopeptide® in a new trademark context such as a domain or handle, or by commissioning a study.

Retail execution and partner responsibilities

Retail and e-commerce execution, including category pages, PDPs, email, paid social, pack shots and on-white imagery for marketplace feeds, search and SEO choices, and keyword selection, are at the partner's discretion within the brand-use and claims guardrails set out in this manual. The approved claim set applies uniformly across surfaces; there is no short-form versus long-form tiering, and ad copy, PDP copy, and long-form content all draw from the same claims and descriptors. Coegin publishes a recommended list price for reference only; the partner sets its own retail prices, and all RRP handling, discounting, bundle pricing, sampling, gift-with-purchase, subscription mechanics, promotional activity, influencer and affiliate work, user reviews, and user-generated content moderation are entirely at the partner's discretion. All partner commercial and marketing activity must comply with applicable advertising, consumer-protection, marketing, and data-protection rules and regulations in the partner's market. Accessibility of partner-produced digital assets follows WCAG 2.1 AA as a baseline, consistent with the rest of this manual.

Partner customer-service responses to public reviews and questions should be human, on-brand, and compliant with this manual, meaning no off-list claims and no medical advice. Anything that cannot be answered from within this manual, and anything that looks like an adverse event or a product quality complaint, routes to marketing@coeginpharma.com and to the adverse-event and product-quality channels set out in the purchase order and its annexes respectively. Adverse events, product quality complaints, recall and safety cooperation, and other regulatory matters are governed by the purchase order and its annexes, not by this manual.

27 LEGAL AND TRADEMARKS

Rights, ownership, and use

This section summarises how the Vexienne® and Follicopeptide® marks, and the materials in this manual, may be used by partners. It sits alongside, and does not replace, the trademark licence and brand compliance provisions in the governing purchase order between Coegin Pharma AB and the partner. Where this manual and the purchase order overlap, the purchase order prevails.

Ownership of the marks

Vexienne® and Follicopeptide® are registered trademarks of Coegin Pharma AB. Coegin retains full ownership of the brands, of the product formulations and associated intellectual property, and of all marketing materials supplied under the Vexienne brand. All goodwill arising from a partner's use of the marks accrues to Coegin. Partners do not acquire any right, title, or interest in the marks beyond the limited licence granted in the purchase order, and partners may not register, or assist any third party to register, any trademark, domain name, social handle, or other identifier that contains, is similar to, or is a translation of Vexienne® or Follicopeptide®.

Scope of the partner licence

The right to use the Vexienne® and Follicopeptide® marks is granted to each partner by Coegin under the purchase order as a limited, non-exclusive, non-transferable, and revocable licence. It applies only within the territory, the channels, and the distribution term set out in that purchase order, and only for the purpose of marketing, distributing, and selling the Vexienne® products actually supplied under it. Packaging and labelling must be used exactly as supplied by Coegin. Partner-created marketing materials, such as product detail pages, emails, banners, category pages, and social posts, may be produced and published by the partner without case-by-case approval provided they stay inside the approved claims, descriptors, voice, logo, and brand-use rules set out in this manual. Pre-approval in writing from Coegin is required only for uses that go beyond those rules, and for the specific situations listed under "What partners may not do" below.

Using the Vexienne® mark

The Vexienne® wordmark and logo are used in accordance with the logo system, colour palette, typography, clear space, and minimum size rules set out earlier in this manual. The ® symbol must appear on the first or most prominent use of the mark in any asset. Partners must not recolour, redraw, stretch, crop, or otherwise alter the logo, and must not create their own lockups, icons, or graphic treatments of the Vexienne wordmark.

Using the Follicopeptide® mark

Follicopeptide® is an ingredient brand and a word mark only. No Follicopeptide® logo exists and none may be created. It is typeset as plain text in the same font as the surrounding copy, always with the ® symbol on first or most prominent use in an asset. It is always used as an adjective, placed before a generic noun. Correct usage is “Vexienne® Hair Active X, powered by Follicopeptide®”, “Follicopeptide® technology”, or “contains Follicopeptide®”. Incorrect usage is “Follicopeptide improves hair density”, “the Follicopeptide treatment”, or any product named primarily after the ingredient.

Partners must not alter, abbreviate, translate, or create variants of the Follicopeptide® mark. Forms such as “FolliPep”, “FP”, phonetic spellings, and local-language versions are not permitted. The Vexienne® brand and product name must be clearly dominant in any layout that also carries Follicopeptide®, and the Follicopeptide® word mark should not exceed roughly seventy per cent of the size of the Vexienne wordmark in the same composition. The line “Powered by Follicopeptide®” is a lockup element only and must not be used as a standalone tagline, headline, or strapline in partner body copy, headlines, campaign lines, or running text.

Where the Follicopeptide® mark is used in an asset, an attribution legend must be visible somewhere in that asset, worded as:

“Follicopeptide® is a registered trademark of Coegin Pharma AB, used under license.”

What partners may not do

- Use the Vexienne® or Follicopeptide® marks in domain names, app names, social handles, hashtags, or metatags without Coegin’s prior written approval.
- Sub-license the marks, or authorise retailers, agencies, influencers, or other third parties to use them, without Coegin’s prior written approval.
- Commission, sponsor, publish, or promote any clinical or observational study relating to the products or to Follicopeptide® without Coegin’s prior written approval.
- Make claims beyond those approved in this manual, or use the marks in comparative, disparaging, misleading, unlawful, or off-label contexts.

Oversight and responsibility

Oversight, reporting, and termination

Coegin may review partner use of the marks and the materials in this manual, and may require changes or the withdrawal of any asset that is inconsistent with this manual or with the purchase order. Partners correct or withdraw non-compliant materials at their own cost. Suspected misuse, counterfeits, or unauthorised third-party use of the Vexienne® or Follicopeptide® marks should be reported to marketing@coeginpharma.com within 48 hours of becoming aware of them. Coegin controls any enforcement action.

Responsibility and scope

Coegin Pharma AB acts as the Responsible Person for Vexienne® products under EU Regulation 1223/2009 in the territories in which the product is placed on the market. Coegin is responsible for the safety, compliance, and claim substantiation of the product. Partners are responsible for ensuring that their own use of Vexienne brand elements, language, and claims in their own channels complies with applicable local advertising and marketing rules, and with the guidance set out in this manual.
